MNH&V: The Role of the Adult Role Model

Positive adult role models are instrumental to the growth and development of a child. For a child who is deaf or hard of hearing (DHH) a powerful role model can be someone who is also DHH. With the importance of role models in mind MNH&V has arranged for adult role models to attend family events in the metro area. The adult role models involved in this effort reflect the diversity of our MNH&V families, for example; diverse educational backgrounds (i.e. mainstreamed, residential school, college, grad school, etc.), diverse family backgrounds (i.e. hearing family, Deaf family, etc.), diverse employment background (i.e. teachers, professionals, students, etc.), diverse hearing status (i.e. unilateral, bilateral, moderate, severe, profound, etc.), diverse communication methods (i.e. ASL, spoken language, cued speech, etc.), and diverse use of amplification devices (i.e. hearing aids, cochlear implant, etc.). The adult role models understand the importance of being a positive role model in the lives of children who are DHH and to be of support to their families.

When asked to comment about MNH&V adult role model effort, Becky Rosenthal who is the Program Director for ASLBlend, commented, “Meeting an Adult Role Model at a MNH&V event would be a benefit because the child who is DHH will meet others like them, and not feel alone.” To illustrate the importance of adult role models who are DHH she added, “In the past Deaf adults grew up thinking they would become ‘hearing’ because their adult role models were hearing family members or hearing teachers or hearing speech pathologists.” Meeting an adult who is DHH gives children who are DHH a sense of a larger community of people who share their life experiences.

For parents of a child who is DHH the adult role models reassure them of their child’s future potential. “I’ve had hearing parents tell me getting to know me made them feel that their child who is DHH will be all right in the future. Growing up Deaf myself, meeting adults was really powerful, so I want to help bridge more families with amazing adults in our community,” wrote Emily Burke, Parent Education Guide and the one spearheading our DHH adult infusion efforts.

The 2007 position statement of the Joint Committee on Infant Hearing (JCIH) states, “Optimally, adults who are DHH should play an integral part in the Early Hearing Detection and Intervention (EHDI) program.” The position statement then lists several benefits, for example, “providing families with a full range of information about communication options, assistive technology, and resources that are available in the community.” Lifetrack’s Deaf Mentor Family Program is a program that stands out for bringing hearing parents together with adults who are DHH. In 2000, the program was part of the Minnesota Department of Health and Human Services before it was awarded to Lifetrack in 2012. “Our Minnesota Deaf Mentor Family Program focuses on the communication needs of families with children who are DHH from birth to age 6,” said Danielle Gounaris, who is the Program Coordinator. She added, “by interacting with deaf adults, the families feel more confident in raising their DHH child to grow into a successful individual.”

Over the past two years the Deaf Mentor Family Program has grown to employ 18 deaf mentors and has enrolled approximately 45 families. When asked about the future plans of the program, Nicole Brown from the MN Department of Health commented, “We are excited that the funding provided by the legislature allows us to expand the number of families served by Deaf Mentors, providing sign language instruction and support for those families who choose ASL. We’re also excited in the future the funding will provide the opportunity for families of all children who are DHH (no matter which communication opportunities they choose) the opportunity to have access to support, mentorship and guidance from individuals who are DHH. Individuals who are DHH often provide families with a unique perspective that others cannot.” Lifetrack’s Deaf Mentor Family Program is an in-depth two-year program that continues to be a success for many families with young children who are DHH with future plans to include more families.

Having MNH&V adult role models at events is a relaxed way for families to connect with adults who are DHH and benefit from the wealth of information and insight they have to share. “I felt like having a deaf mentor opened up another world for our family. A world that I didn’t really know existed, and definitely have never been exposed to,” said a MNH&V mom when asked about her experience in the Deaf Mentor Family Program and her thoughts about meeting more adult role models at MNH&V events. All the adult role models have received special training by MNH&V staff. The training included an overview of the MNH&V mission, guidelines, role-play, and some practical ways to introduce themselves to families. They are prepared to answer questions about the day-to-day realities of being DHH, their career paths, educational experiences, and provide hope for parents that their child can live a full and successful life as individuals who are DHH. In addition, every adult role model signs an agreement to maintain the highest level of service, integrity, and safety for all participants along with having a background check. “The adult role model is a stepping stone for action bringing together families of children who are DHH within the diversity of the Deaf community. Parents want to feel confident that their children will be all right,” adds Emily Burke.

Safe and Supportive Minnesota Schools Act

Governor Mark Dayton signed the Safe and Supportive Minnesota Schools Act into law on April 9, 2014. Now, collaboration between students, parents, educators, and administrators can begin to develop safe learning environments for every child.

“Bullying has negatively impacted too many students for too long,” said Julie Hertzog, Director of PACER’s National Bullying Prevention Center. “Now that this law is in place, educators will have resources to address the behavior and students and families will know that they have the right to be safe at school.”

The Act includes the following elements:

Clear definitions: The act defines what behaviors and patterns of behavior are considered bullying, including behaviors that occur online.

Local policies: Districts can tailor bullying prevention policies to fit the unique needs of their communities.

Designated advocates: Each school will have a designated staff member for reports of bullying behavior.

Support for students: Schools will provide resources for those who are being bullied, implement restorative and responsive practices for those who engage in bullying, and educate all students on how to prevent and address bullying behavior.

Students with disabilities: Parents and teachers can work together to address bullying issues in the child’s Individualized Education Plan or 504 Plan.

Additional support for schools: School districts will receive policy development and implementation from the School Safety Technical Assistance Center at the Minnesota Department of Education.

Rapper Sean Forbes
On Monday, May 5th, Sean Forbes, a deaf hip-hop artist, drew hundreds to the University of Minnesota’s Coffman Memorial Union. Forbes performs in both ASL and English. The concert was free to the public, sponsored by the U of M’s Disability Resource Center.

Sean Forbes, age 31, is a successful songwriter, an accomplished percussionist, and the co-founder of Deaf Professional Arts Network (D-PAN). Sean grew up in Detroit in a family of musicians. He became deaf at the age of 2 months old after an illness with a high fever.

In an interview for ABILITY Magazine, Sean Forbes talked about his interest in music. “When I was very young, my parents noticed I could make a rhythm that was consistent, like a beats-per-minute, essentially. When I was five, my parents bought me a drum set because they noticed my propensity for rhythm.”

Sean Forbes met Joel Martin, Eminem’s publisher and owner of 54 Sound Studios, and D-PAN co-founder, at the Detroit Music Awards years ago. Forbes relentlessly pitched his signed music video idea to Martin. Martin hired Forbes as an intern to do market research on his idea. Forbes found American Sign Language (ASL) performers doing theater productions, but not music videos. Forbes and Martin then became co-founders of D-PAN in 2006. Since then, D-PAN has licensed dozens of popular songs and created videos featuring performers who are DHH expressing music lyrics through ASL. D-PAN is a nonprofit organization dedicated to making music and music culture accessible.

Next for Sean Forbes is another nationwide tour this fall, traveling to major cities, performing in nightclubs and schools.

Back-to-School Checklist Starter for Parents with Children who are DHH

There are so many things to consider as our children who are deaf and hard of hearing (DHH) head back to school. Parents with a child who is DHH have additional responsibilities and considerations. The more we can do to prepare our children before school starts the more confidence they will have during school.

Health and Wellness
Schedule annual appointments far in advanced during summer break or for after-school to minimize disruptions in your child’s learning.

☑ Well-care Visit
A well-care visit establishes a baseline of your child’s general health with a doctor you can trust. Many children who are DHH have ongoing health issues that can be noted as part of the child’s baseline health. Should your child become ill, the well-care notes along with a doctor who is familiar with your child can streamline a diagnosis for any new concerns.

☑ Update Immunizations
Remember to ask for a copy of your child’s immunization records. This saves time filling out health forms for fieldtrips, activities, emergency health cards, etc.

☑ Medication Check
If your child is on medications have a doctor double-check the dose for their age, weight, effective, etc. Extra time for your child to adjust to changes in medications would be helpful before school starts. Make sure your child’s current prescription is filled and ready before school starts.

☑ Physical Paperwork
Sports, camps, summer school, etc. often require health forms signed by a doctor. Bringing the forms to their appointment will save time. Doctors can sign forms any time, but it can take extra time to process.

☑ Visit the Dentist and/or Orthodontist
Again, schedule appointments well in advanced to get times that are least disruptive to your child’s learning.

☑ Vision Check
Children who are DHH need to have optimal vision. An annual eye exam is recommended whether your child wears corrective eyewear or not. If your child has glasses, in addition to checking the lens prescription, check for stretches that can obscure their vision. Make sure their frames are the right size with no pressure points and adjusted to fit properly.

☑ Audiologist Visit
As parents with a child who is DHH we spend a lot of time at the audiologist’s office. We know that equipment can malfunction at inconvenient times. Before school starts have your audiologist check your child’s equipment, make sure the program is set for optimal sound and amplification for your child. If possible create a separate program for any auxiliary equipment used at school. Your audiologist can answer any questions and make sure you and your child understand how to change programs, batteries and general care of the equipment. Don’t forget to take notes for the school audiologist!

Remember to have for your child’s old CI processors and hearing aids programed as up-to-date as possible. Old equipment is a viable back-up plan should something happen to their newer equipment.

☑ Review Insurance and Warranties
Depending on your child’s age, maturity, and many other variables it can be unsettling to send them to school with expensive equipment. Reduce anxiety by having a plan should something happen to their equipment. Most homeowner insurance does not cover this equipment. Talk to your audiologist, check product warranties and contact your healthcare customer service to figure out the most economical insurance coverage available.

At Home
☑ Find a safe and accessible place to charge batteries and keep equipment.
☑ Set up a distraction-free place to study and keep extra school supplies.
☑ Have your child memorize their home address and important phone numbers to reach their parents if need be.
☑ Label everything going to school.
☑ Update your contact list to include the bus service, IEP manager, DHH and general ed teacher/s, school nurse, attendance line, food service, etc.
☑ Check the school website for important dates: parent/teacher conferences, school events, and a list of days school is not in session.

At School
☑ Check for a VISUAL alert system and review with your child.
☑ Check tech devices for captioning capabilities; computers, televisions, etc.
☑ See the school nurse if your child has severe allergies or takes medications during the school day.
☑ Visit the school audiologist to touch base about your child’s equipment and the auxiliary equipment used at school.
☑ Send extra CI or hearing aid batteries to use for back-up if needed.
☑ Check your child’s classroom for ways to best accommodate their access to language in that environment.
☑ Together with your IEP team review your child’s accommodations needs with school administrators and, if appropriate, with fellow students.

For children who are DHH there is no one back-to-school checklist parents can rely on that covers personal choices and their child’s unique situation. Developing your own checklist that you can add to over time will give you peace of mind and valuable time for summer fun!
